Description

Open Court is a website designed to provide information such as the average number of cases a given court handles, the time a case lasts, the court workload, the average budget, and the experience of judges working in court. The website covers 49 courts in Lithuania, including the district courts, the district administrative courts, the Supreme Administrative Court, the Court of Appeal, and the Supreme Court.

Benefits

The website makes court statistics that are relevant to the public available and allows users to compare various courts in one graphical overview.

How open data is used

Open Court makes use of the statistics published by the National Courts Administration which are publicly available.
